Key points

- In acting we try to live a written script as if it is real.
- As humans, we tend to speak a lot inwardly with our self which is called inner monologues
- We use inner monologues while we are alone, or when we meet and talk to others
- At times our inner monologues could be absolutely contradictory to what we are saying outwardly
- Our facial expressions, body language and voice tend to express our inner monologues in a distinctive way
- While performing a scene if we could fill our performance with inner monologues, it makes it look more real
- With inner monologues, our whole concentration is on the scene, aligning are expressions & body language
- You can use inner monologues when you have a dialogue or even when you have nothing to say in a scene

Practical Exercise

Stand in front of a mirror and run the following inner monologues. Pick one inner monologue and repeat it several times to see how your facial expressions and body language are reacting to it.

1st Inner monologue: "I look so great, I am so talented, I am going to be very famous very soon"

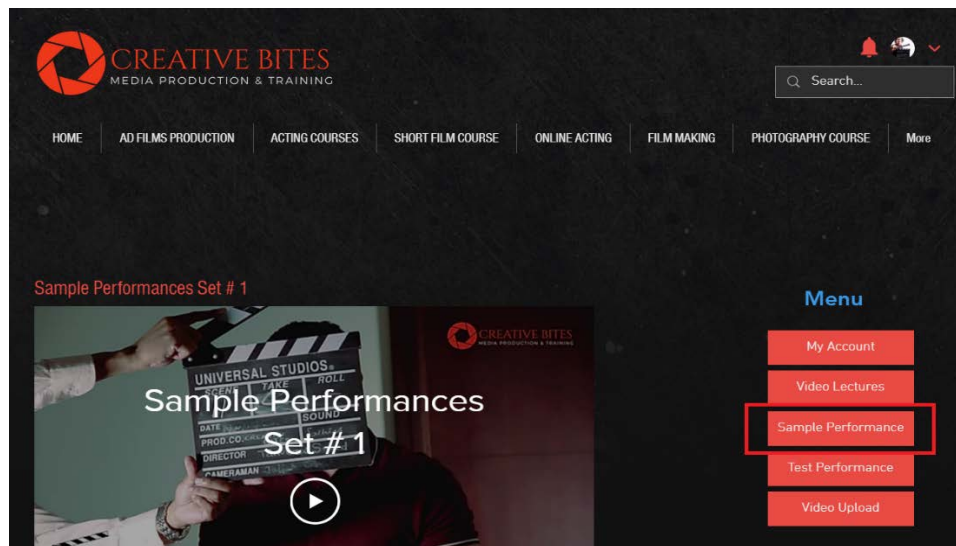

2nd Inner monologue: "No body likes me, I do so much for every one, they all hate me"

3rd Inner monologue: "If next time my boss insult me, I am going to shout back at him in front of every one, I am not scared of him"

Pick up more real situations from your life and start thinking about them. Remember not to utter a single word outward, all your thought has to be in the form of inner monologue and see how your expression and body language react to different inner

Step 7

Check Sample performances in the Menu

Step 8

Review scripts of the test performances

Step 9

Shoot and upload the test performances

Recommended Timeline

Timeline:

- Watch online video lecture and practice daily exercises.
- Start reviewing samples performances from 1st month and keep revisiting the video lectures
- Review test scripts and start preparing for test performances in the 2nd month
- Shoot and upload 3 test performances in third month
